

RACHEL C. GREEN, MPA

Rachel C. Green has dedicated her life to serving the New Jersey community, particularly in the areas of education and social justice. With over 50 years as a resident of the state, she currently resides in Millville with her husband, Franklin Green. As a proud mother to two grown children, Alexandra and Alston, Rachel's commitment to nurturing the future of both her own family and the wider community shines through in her extensive career in public service.

Rachel's educational background is impressive, holding a bachelor's degree in business management and a post-graduate degree in Public Administration. She is also currently pursuing a Doctoral Degree in the Management of Organizational Leadership, further emphasizing her dedication to continuous growth and development in the field. Over the years, Rachel has worked alongside fellow school board members, administrators, and district staff to create and implement numerous programs and cost-saving initiatives for the Deptford Township School District. Her leadership has brought about meaningful positive change in the district, benefiting both the school system and the broader community.

Throughout her career, Rachel has been a staunch advocate for educational equity, civil rights, and social justice, particularly for children in New Jersey. Her passion for serving her community has led her to serve on various boards and committees, where she has earned multiple awards recognizing her invaluable contributions. Through her work, Rachel continues to inspire others in the fight for a better, fairer world for all.
